Abstract

In this talk, an illustration is presented about a case report by sectioning it in various segments and showing the importance of the arguments made in each section. With the help of this case report, which is already published in a Pub Med indexed high end journal of Ayurveda and Integrative medicine, the core concepts of case report writing relevant to traditional medicine is lucidly presented.

Besides writing the report, the talk also deliver a message about the critical component of responding to the reviewers comments. By sharing the comments and by explaining that how the comments were responded, it gives a fist hand idea to listeners about how the comments from reviewers and editor should be responded in order to increase the acceptability of the report for publication.
